

Walk 2. Sunday May 17th.

London of the Romans

Today we trace the footprint of Londinium that was founded almost 2000 years ago! We'll see the importance - and size - of the wall that encircled the city. We'll stand over a gateway that was later home to the "father of English Literature" and we'll walk on top of the largest basilica and forum outside of Italy. London is a city that has been constantly inhabited since the invasion so, as many of us know, there's not much to explore unless you are an archaeologist and that's where the great surprise comes in because we'll dive beneath the surface to see real remains that were found by accident. Hear how London's history has been uncovered to the present day and plans to reveal more in the future. It's a good news story for heritage and history lovers.
